In 1951 the American Library Association ALA Council approved new standards for accrediting library education programs. These standards shifted accreditation from the bachelor's degree to the master's degree, making the master's degree in library science the professional credential for entry into the profession. At the time, librarians believed this change would transform the practice of librarianship. The nature of the call for a reexamination of ALA's decision in 1951 to make the MLS the primary degree for entry into the profession. Swigger examines why the decision was made and whether or not it is a currently valid model for today's students. He suggests
