Histories and Theories:

This new book provides an authoritative and inspiring response to today's growing fascination with the idea of the archive and contains cutting edge research articles on the history and theory of archives and records written by internationally renowned and emerging scholars. Engaging with Records and Archives offers a selection of the most original insightful and imaginative papers from the Seventh International Conference on the History of Records. The diverse papers submitted by eleven authors make challenging reading so this book will interest academics and can be used as a textbook in history or archives courses. It may also interest records managers and scholars in media studies and history as well.
