By Natasha Simons, Joanna Richardson : New Content in Digital Repositories: The Changing Research Landscape (Chandos Information Professional Series) New Content in Digital Repositories: The Changing

Research Landscape (Chandos Information Professional Series):

Research institutions are under pressure to make their outputs more accessible in order to meet funding requirements and policy guidelines. Libraries have traditionally played an important role by exposing research output through a predominantly institution based digital repository with an emphasis on storing published works. New publishing paradigms are emerging that include research data, huge volumes of which are being generated globally. Repositories are the natural this up to date clear and well written primer provides a practical perspective on key aspects of digital repositories and what librarians and archivists need to be thinking about as they plan to ingest new content.
